

Bill Wendy Kippen

Yesterday at 9:28 am · 🌐

"After Dominion vacated this location in favour of a new site just north of John Street (where the Daily Bun Bakery presently is) Bannerman's Hardware moved into the site. This picture is taken circa 1941 (a victory bonds sign is visible in Loblaw's second store in Weston). Mr. Bannerman stayed in business until around the end of 1968, and likely closed up due to the death of his son, who I imagine was expected to continue the business."

Bill Wendy Kippen

Yesterday at 9:28 am · 🌐

This is Bannermans Hardware as it looked in the 1960's

Bill Wendy Kippen

Yesterday at 9:28 am · 🌐

This image is circa 1940, but the store interior may be familiar to some of you. This is a view of the inside of Fred Bannerman's Hardware. If that is before your time (as it is with me, by a few years before my moving to Weston), you might be more familiar with the interior when it was the second Westlaw Tavern, or the Weston Station, and so on.

Bill Wendy Kippen

Yesterday at 9:28 am · 🌐

Mr Alex Bannerman

Bill Wendy Kippen

Yesterday at 9:28 am · 🌐

The side entrance on John St taken from the new building under construction across the street were Ken Johns Mens Wear will be located Early 1960's

